Special Dispatch to The Star.

MILWAUKEE, September 30.—The complaints of boxing promoters against boxers have been frequent of late. It is the same old story about boxers, and their managers trying to grab off everything in sight. I had a long letter the other day from a promoter in one of the Ohio towns where twenty-round contests have been permitted during the past few years, but it seems that through the grab-all policy of some of the fighters, the game has been killed in this particular place for the time being. The promoter, in his letter, said he had spent considerable money in arranging the considerable money are the mould have the pounds in w spent considerable money in arranging matters only to find at the eleventh hour that one of the fighters tried to hold him up and spoiled everything. As he had no forfeit posted, it was impossible to get back at him, and as a result the fans became soured on the game and had the whole thing declared They now are making strong efforts to induce the authorities to rescind their order and permit them to get boxers who will live up to their agreements.

get boxers who will live up to their agreements.

That is only one instance of many where the fighters have tried to kill their own game. It is hard to understand why they do it, but, no matter how much argument may be put forward, they go through with the same thing over and over again. They think of no one but themselves and they do not seem to care what injury they do the game so long as they can grab off their money for the time being. All they care about is to get the coin, and if the game is killed in a place where they have helped bury it, they simply go on to the next town and continue their work.

It is to be regretted that boxers do gard to the boxing game is to the effect that Bombardier Wells, who recently defeated Dick Smith for the Sporting Editor Star: feet that Bombardier Wells, who recently defeated Dick Smith for the heavyweight championship of Great Britain, is once more in the good graces of the fans there and now is being boosted for a world heavyweight championship match. There are many of the sporting men on the other side who would gladly back Wells in a match against Willard for the title. They are convinced that he has overcome a great deal of his former timidity in the ring and also that he is much stronger about the body than formerly and can take a blow now without collapsing. However, there still is doubt whether the Bombardier will be able to meet Willard in a championship match. He belongs to one of the regiments there and is liable to be called to the front at any time, and if he is it is a question whether he will return. There haave been a great many boxers killed in action during the past year or two, but up to the present time the Bombardier has been fortunate in escaping the bullets.

It is likely that a championship match for the welterweight title of England will be arranged between Johns Basel.

It is likely that a championship match for the welterweight title of England will be arranged between Johnny Basham, present holder, and Eddie Beattie, the Scotch champion. These boys have battled before and put up a great contest. Beattie has just posted a forfeit of $500 to bind a match with Basham and it is probable that the London Sporting Club will offer a purse for the match some time during November. Jim Sullivan, who formerly held the middle-weight championship, vants to get back in the game, although he announced some time ago that he was through. Jim has come forward with a forfeit of $500 to bind a match with Bandsman Blake. Blake recently won the title and is bound under the terms of agreement to defend it a trace. title and is bound under the terms of agreement to defend it at the call of the London Sporting Club. Sullivan has made a request of the club to match him for the title, and it is possible the contest will be arranged.

Eatter hits an infield fly. The third in the titls, and it is possible the contest will be arranged.

George Clarke, who has been after Jimmy Wilde for a contest on the other side, had a twenty-round battle with Arthur Ireland recently and won in a very decisive manner. There are few of the sporting men there, however, who consider Clarke as having a chance against the wonderful little Welshman.

Another contest fought about the same time was between Tom Gummer and Sergt Donovan. The latter was no match for Gummer, who stopped his man in six rounds.

Tommy Harrison, who aspires to the middle-weight championship, was defeated in fifteen rounds by Louis Ruddick. Harrison had been winning some very good contests of late and was considered one of the best boys in and around London.

Digger Stanley, former bantamweight champion, and considered one of the clevance, and has been matched with Sid Whatly for a tweatty-round contest the latter part of this month.

Welsh would be for Johnny, that he is the greatest featherweight that ever held the title, etc. No one denies that Kilbane is a wonderfully clever fighter, but when he won the title from Abe Attell at Los Angeles February 22, 1912, it was not by a knock-out, but by a point decision, and not much to spare at that. It also must be borne in mind that Attell was never much more than a good-sized bantamweight, for he always was able to make 118 pounds, but could not get to the 115-pound limit. Abe had gone the pace, too, and when he met Johnny at Los Angeles he was not at his best. Just the same, Johnny won and he was given every credit for winning the title. However, there is a doubt whether Kilbane is a greater fighter than Johnny Griffin, George Dixon, Solly Smith, Jem Driscoll and boys of that class; also Terry McGovern when he was a real featherweight. These boys were of high class and every one of them had a knock-out kick. As for beating Freddy Welsh, why, that is another question. Johnny would find a boxer with every bit as much science as he possesses himself and he would have to give away about the service of the services as he possesses himself and he would have to give away about the services as he possesses himself and he would have to give away about the services as he possesses himself and he would have to give away about the services as he possesses himself and he would have to give away about the services as he possesses himself and he would have to give away about the services and the would have to give away about the services as he possesses himself and he would have to give away about the services as he possesses himself and he would have to give away about the services and the would have to give away about the services and the services are services and the services are services as the possesses himself and he would have to give away about the services and the services are services as the possesses himself and he would have to give away about the services are services as the pos

It is to be regretted that boxers do not use a little more judgment and pick out managers of better caliber and with a little more common sense than they do. If there are a dozen good men who probably would take care of their interests in a businesslike manner and one bad egg, it is almost a cinch that the boxer will pick the poor one.

It is just these little things that do so much to hurt the boxing game, but they are gradually being overcome by the adoption in many states and cities, of the commission plan. This seems to be the only means of protecting the game and putting it on a safe basis.

With a man on third and a man on second, the batter hits the ball to the infield. Man on third starts home, man on second reaches third. Ball is fielded to catcher, who stands on home plate. Man from third stops and walks home. Man on second reaches third before man gets home. Catcher throws to second, not touching man from third, trying to get man who hit the ball. Does the run count? Can the man go back from third to second after reaching third?

Certainly the run counted. Read rule 59. Any of the runners could go back.

Sporting Editor Star:

1. The pitcher puts his foot on the pitcher's plate and takes his signal from the catcher, with a man on first base. He starts to deliver the ball to the catcher and in doing so he throws to first base. The runner starts to steal second and is caught between bases. The home club claims "balk." Umpire is undecided. The pitcher faced the batter and threw while he was facing the batter. 2. Should a balk be called on a pitcher when he winds up to deliver the ball to the batter? D. J. W.

1. Sounds like a balk, but would have to see it to decide definitely. 2. It always is a balk if the pitcher delivers the ball without having one of his feet on the slab. Sporting Editor Star:

1. Base runner cuts third base and reaches home. While touching home he is tagged by the catcher, but the ball also is thrown back to third and the runner called out. Who gets the putout, the catcher for tagging the runner or the third baseman for tagging the base? 2. Is the umpire supposed to notify the opposing player to throw the ball back to a base so the umpire can call a man out for cutting a base if only the umpire saw the same?

BYRON.

1. The catcher made the putout, as it was not necessary to throw the ball to third after the runner was touched at the plate. Not having touched third, he could not be safe at home. 2. The umpire cannot call attention to a player cutting a base, but must wait for the team in the field to claim the decision.

short time ago Ashmead Fuller, who some years, besides being a fine tennis player, covered the Chevy Chase course in 80 and missed a wee putt on the last green to score a 79. The women are showing marked activity in golf circles at Chevy Chase, and their ambition is shown by the fact that so many are taking lessons and practicing assiduously.

Jack Burgess, the pro, in the limited time he gets to play, has shown that his lack of practice has not hurt him in the least. Last Thursday he played the first nine holes in company with one of the members and obtaining a four on the long eighth hole, 590 yards in length, had a short putt for a three on the ninth hole to obtain his 35 for the nine, but missed the short putt. His niblick third shot on the eighth lay within eight inches of the cup.

The players of the Columbia Country Club are back on the regular greens. There is a decided improvement shown in the appearance of the putting surfaces. The greens are being groomed in preparation for the invitation event given by the club October 19-21, and J. Martin Scranage, chairman of th

This rule has been in effect for the past year under rule 10 in the etiquetted for golf, but has never been rigidly enforced. The new rule was added at he last meeting of the United States Golf Association and specifically forbids a player who has won a medal prize to take his trophy unless he intends to compete in the match play rounds. For instance, the winner of the medal round in one of the tourneys around the Metropolitan district defaulted his first match round and was awarded his qualification medal. Interesting Golf Notes

From the Local Clubs

Golf at the Chevy Chase Club has again reached its normal stage with practically all the playing members of the club back and frequenting the course. Some of them are going very well, too. Last week Samuel Dalzell, who has been playing golf at his summer home on the St. Lawrence river, went around the Chevy Chase course in 79 with a pair of missed putts, and a short time ago Ashmead Fuller, who some years, besides being a fine tennis.

Condition of the course was thought adequate to hold a tournament and a feveral meeting Thursday the comments of which was the matter over at the general meeting Thursday the comments of the four sixteens, as has heretofore been the general rule, the club will present medals to the winners of the event will be made shortly. The tourney will be made shortly. The tourney will be open to all members of clubs belonging to the U.S. G. A. and to specially invited guests. The qualification round at eighteen holes will be held Thursday, the 12th, with the first and second rounds the day following and the semi-finals and finals carded for Saturday, October 19.

J. Martin Scranage, chairman of the short time ago Ashmead Fuller, who some years, besides being a fine tennis player, covered the Chevy Chase course in 80 and missed a wee putt on the last green to score a 79. The women are showing marked activity in golf circles at Chevy Chase, and their ambition is shown by the fact that so many are taking lessons and practicing assiduously.

The players of the Columbia Country Club are back on the regular greens. There is a decided improvement shown in the appearance of the putting surfaces. The greens are being groomed in preparation for the invitation event given by the club October 19-21, and the course as a whole is rapidly approaching the state of perfection which is necessary when a club gives the comprehensive affair which Columbia contemplates this year. The hope that Perry Adair and Bob Jones, the young golf phenoms from Georgia, may come Perry Adair and Bob Jones, the young golf phenoms from Georgia, may come and compete in the Columbia event has been quickened, and it is very possible that the fans of the Capital city may see these youngsters in action. Undoubtedly these two young men are bound to be ranked high among the coming golfers of the country, if only on the showing they made at the recent amateur championship. For a man to qualify in his first big national event is a great thing, but for him to win two matches, and particularly against the class of the men Jones had to beat, surely speaks more than words can tell of the quality of his golf. Adair is not far behind. In his first southern championship he occupied the runner-up position, defeating in his way to the ultimate round men many years his senior. He qualified in the western amateur championship, in 1914, well up in the list, and his latest feat, that of making a place in the first thirty-two in the country, entitles him to a high place in the golfing annals of the country.

The tournament committee of the Columbia Country Club is introducing this year an innovation never before tried and one which is likely to sound the death knell of the Saturday afternoon handicap on the closing day of a tournament. In the Columbia tourney the handicap event, which usually is played on Saturday afternoon, clogging up the course and interfering with the movements of the finalists, will be played in conjunction with the qualification round. That is, the winner of the second gross prize receives the same award he would have received had he won the Saturday gross event. Two prizes will be given for first and second iow net. No prizes will be awarded to any man who wins one of the handicap places and then fails to compete in the tourney.

The limit in handicaps on the day of the qualification round will be eighteen. No matches or play of any kind except the semi-finals and finals will be permitted on the course Saturday, October 21. The committee reserves the right to disqualify any contestant who is not ready to commence play at the time assigned. The list of pairings will be published in the newspapers. The best thoroughbred racers in the country are gathered at Laurel Park for the race meeting that is to begin at that course tomorrow. Laurel Park is the most conveniently located course in the east, it is said, and is the only properly call its own. This year's meeting will be the most successful from every point of view ever held at Laurel Park. Since last fall there have been extensive improvements made and the track itself is now regarded by horseextensive improvements made and the track itself is now regarded by horsemen as the fastest in the country. Col. Matt Winn, the manager of Laurel Park, who is also the genius of the new course at Churchill Downs and that at Juarez, in Mexico, believes the Maryland plant is the most complete he has ever had anything to do with, and he appreciate the properties of the country heart.

Steeplechasing is to be a big feature of the meeting. Two stakes have been framed for the jumpers, and there will be overnight cross-country races every day or two. The steeplechase field is a new one entirely within the course and has been pronounced by so good a judge as Jockey Willie Allen the best in the country.
